BIOGRAPHY

The electrifying synth driven Atlanta based foursome, Dearestazazel, has arrived! Handcrafted songs ooze with sugar and spice blended with more hooks than a tackle box. The contagious keyboard melodies and tasty sing-along song arrangements captivate listeners while opera trained music master lead singer, Peter Armstrong, shows a vocal range as wide as a Montana cattle ranch. Add in heaping amounts of Drummer Ricardo Melendez who beats the drums with the same vengeance as he beat the man who attacked him with a knife outside of an Atlanta-area bank and a generous portion of guitar shreds from the uber talented formally trained Jesse Greene. Round it out and everything falls into place thanks to wannabe stuntman, ex almost paraplegic, and bass player Chris Wall who himself has been known to fall into places – specifically concrete head first from three stories. Work the mixture for two years of relentless national touring, kneed in many a night sleeping in a van, bake in the Florida sun for three months, and follow up with a good night's freeze in Pennsylvania. When the mixture solidifies, throw it into the studio with one of the most talented young producers around, Matt Malpass. Dearestazazel is now ready. Stick a fork in them and present them to the world in July 2008.
